A Teacher Education Advancement Network Seminar

This workshop is presented by TEAN, the Teacher Education Advancement Network. TEAN's aims for Teacher Education are: to enhance practice, to support and promote innovation and development, to contribute to and help build research capacity; to contribute to policy development and implementation.

The seminar is sponsored by ESCalate, the Education
Subject Centre of the Higher Education Academy

TEAN and ESCalate working together for the future of teacher education

What is the seminar about?

Responding to Change Integration and collaboration

The recent White Paper 'The importance of Teaching – The Schools White Paper 2010' has suggested reform to teacher training in England. Just what does this mean for Higher Education Institutions in England? How should HEIs respond in uncertain times and go forward positively to the future? This seminar gives delegates an opportunity to debate the issues, to identify challenges and opportunities and to share ideas on ways forward. It is one of a series of seminars presented by TEAN and supported by ESCalate; there will be similar events in Wales, Northern Ireland and Scotland, focussing on issues relevant to each individual country. Outcomes from all four events will be reported on the TEAN and the ESCalate websites.

Keynote speakers

TEAN is delighted to welcome Andy Jones, PVC and Dean of Institute of Education, Manchester Metropolitan University and Dr Sam Twiselton, Dean of Education at the University of Cumbria to give the keynote addresses at the seminar. Andy Jones has worked extensively as a teacher trainer, in-service tutor and consultant across all phases of education. Dr Twiselton's interests and research centre on student teacher development and curriculum development; she works with organisations across the sector for the furtherance of good practice in ITE.

Who is it for?

The seminar will be of particular interest to all those involved in the planning of initial teacher education courses, in all phases (early years, primary and secondary). We welcome colleagues working in universities or schools.
